

Department of Health

Strong foundations. Solid future.

2024 Aboriginal Graduate Program

Unleash your full potential as one of WA Health's future leaders, in a range of health and non-health related professions.

Our Aboriginal Graduate Program is a two-year (24-month) training and employment development program offering you a head start in your health career, within a culturally supportive and welcoming workplace, as well as an attractive salary.

Benefits of being a graduate officer

- Job and financial security
- Workplace rotations in rural and metro areas
- Access to structured learning and development programs
- Cultural mentoring and career coaching
- Opportunity to build lasting networks
- A culturally safe and supportive workplace
- Flexible work and leave arrangements
- Significant support to transition to permanent employment

Am I eligible for the program?

To apply for an Aboriginal Graduate Officer position, you need to:

- identify as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander
- have completed, or going to complete, your degree between January 2022 and December 2024
- be a newly qualified graduate (undergraduate or post-graduate qualification), from a recognised university, with no more than 12 months full-time employment experience post-graduation by the commencement of the Aboriginal Graduate Program.

Scan to learn more.

Applications
open
25 October until
11 December
2023

Our future, our way.

